Description of Property and Eligibility Determination: (Use continuation sheet if necessary and attach map and photo)

This property is a mid-nineteenth century residential building constructed of coursed rubble stone. It has a five-bay, double pile plan with a symmetrical front elevation. A one-story hip roofed porch runs across the full width of the first floor of the front elevation. The building is topped with a longitudinal gable roof that sports a large, central perpendicular gable flanked by smaller gabled dormers.

On the first floor, a pair of transomed french windows open on to the porch in both bays to either side of the central front door, while the second floor has (two-over-two double-hung?) sash which appear to be intact behind plywood covers. The porch retains all of its mass produced jig-sawn railing and brackets although two bays of the porch have
